Additionally, all short films submitted to the Festival (whether they are selected for screening or not) are made available for viewing in the Marketplace Library at the Festival Business Centre and contact details are published in the Marketplace Catalogue. The CFC Worldwide Short Film Festival is the largest market in North America for the sales and acquisitions of short films. In 2007, over 400 shorts were acquired for broadcast and distribution due to their inclusion in the Marketplace Library, and it is a valuable resource for the many buyers, distributors and programmers who attend the Festival.

ABOUT THE FESTIVAL

The CFC Worldwide Short Film Festival is the premier venue for the exhibition and promotion of short film in North America and one of the leading short film festivals in the world. Now in its fourteenth year, the Festival was founded by Brenda Sherwood in 1994 and acquired by the Canadian Film Centre in 2000.

The Canadian Film Centre is Canada's foremost institution for advanced training and production in film, television and new media. Founded in 1988 by Canadian-born Academy Award®-winning filmmaker Norman Jewison, the Centre provides world-class training for emerging Canadian directors, writers, producers, editors and new media professionals who hone their art in an intensely creative, hands-on and individualized environment under the guidance of the finest industry professionals.

The CFC Worldwide Short Film Festival is dedicated to celebrating and sharing with audiences the exciting world of short film. In addition to Official Selection screenings of international and Canadian shorts, the Festival features special presentations, retrospectives and gala screenings. The WSFF's Festival Business Centre offers a unique opportunity for filmmakers and industry representatives to connect, converse and conduct business. It houses the largest marketplace in North America for the sale and acquisition of short films and attracts buyers, distributors and programmers from around the world. And the Short Films, BIG IDEAS Symposium gives filmmakers the chance to explore their craft, meet the professionals and gain valuable insight into marketing their short films.

"The programmer's taste is impeccable: last year they selected five shorts that went on to be nominated for Oscars®. Two of them won..."—Susan Walker, The Toronto Star

"The Festival is an important event for Canadian filmmakers, not only as a showcase for their work, but as a forum in which they can relate to excellent international work in the genre and mingle with moving image artists from around the world" —Jack Ofield, Executive Producer, The Short List for PBS
