SYNOPSIS

Charlotte is alone on a road trip. On an isolated side road, she picks up Max, a hitchhiker, who disappears in the bathroom of a truck-stop restaurant a few miles later. Puzzled, Charlotte comes back at night to look for him but gets caught by La Spack, a singular woman in charge of an odd pack. Charlotte quickly realizes….she’s next on the menu.

INTRODUCTION

The Pack is a French-Belgium film with an uncommon tone. Thanks to its originality and surrealism, this project attracted famous actors who were not used to making genre films. Unlike French genre films produced or written in France over the past few years, The Pack is not showing torture and doesn’t want to hurt the audience. The Pack embarks the audience in a travel in a post industrial world where regular and logical marks will be completely useless. The building model for the film is the one of a modern Western.
DIRECTOR’S LETTER OF INTENT

“I love genre films since childhood. At that time, this term didn’t mean only horror movies, but various type of films, such as action, fantastic, science fiction, thriller and adventure ones.

To sum things up, let's say that I really appreciate cinema when it is smart and popular, and this is what I tried to achieve while filming THE PACK. I do say “tried”, because it was a real try. I wanted to go back towards an atmospheric fantastic cinema that gets away, as much as possible, from the wave of films of torture that erupts on our screens today. That type of cinema is really unbearable for me. My real references are rather Franju’s cinema, or Tourneur’s one and even Carpenter’s.

The lighting choices were dictated by the locations we chose to shoot. The slag heap had a particular ambiance (its wind, its dry ground…). Therefore, I wanted the night sequences to offer a very purified atmosphere and look, with a very contrasting light. Laurent Barès, the director of photography, allowed the shadows to do their job, and he did not hesitate to stow the moments that had to be stowed.

The mining background of the film allowed me to surround it in a reality that I knew. Using my past (the closing of the Lorraine mines in years 80-90) and a French region tradition, I tried to propose something new by avoiding, as much as I could copying the American big brother, Carpenter.

Starting here, many things followed, even the idea of having monsters (these golems born from the muck and the blood of the underground dead miners) who can only live in the ground of the slag heap. These heaps of waste, the last relics of the old times.

I did this film because I believe that it is still possible to make a good genre film in France, and because it is an excellent way to struggle against a certain hierarchical organization of culture….”

Franck RICHARD - Director
SET DESIGN

The director Franck Richard took all his team, over many nights, to shoot at the top of a slag heap near Mons in Belgium. Nothing stopped the shooting on the top of this slag heap; neither the tempest, nor the horse that almost drowned pulling Spack’s cart.

The other challenge in making this film was the construction of the farm. The chosen setting was built entirely on an arid and empty ground, which comes naturally out of the sky by an effect of twilight.

Belgian duo Florence VERCHEVAL and Eugénie COLLET were in charge of designing the sets. “The barn, with its big woodwork on the ceiling, had a graphic interest. We repainted everything and revised windows to make a sieved light. Then, we constructed the hall, the door… that sort of tunnel that represents anxiety and leads to the “circle”, the machine to be force-fed, imagined by Franck Richard and the designer TANXXX… As if we were arriving in the allegory. The result is rather theatrical, it is almost an opera”.

Another important visual element in the movie is that red is the colour of blood and only that. There is no red on screen (object, setting, clothes) unless it is blood. Working on an ambience in the bluish, greenish and grey tones, accentuates the red colour of blood. “The idea of the red colour was Franck’s idea. Blood was the most important thing for him. And the best way for it to show, was to work on a monochrome picture, without any red in the costumes nor in the sets. The result is quite satisfying”.

THE MUSIC

For the director Franck Richard, music is as important as cinema in life. Therefore music has always been a key element of his cinematic projects.

“For this film, I have always had in mind a soundtrack made with a strong industrial stench. So it seemed natural to me to entrust the task (encouraged by the artist TANXXX with whom I worked on the storyboard) to Chris Spencer (Unsane) and Ari Benjamin Meyers (Einstürzende Neubauten). Chris and I share the same passion for the simplicity and effectiveness of John Carpenter’s film music. I needed this kind of music to make some sequences of my film successful.” Franck Richard

The soundtrack is made and recorded by Ari Benjamin MEYERS and Chris SPENCER, founder of this rock and “noisy” group UNSANE, created in 1988, and composed by Chris SPENCER (guitar, voice), Peter SHORE (bass, voice) et Vinny Signorelli (drums).

This famous New Yorker group places its influence into rock groups such as The Melvins, AC/DC, The Stooges, Flipper ou Car Alarms.

Their discography contains 7 albums :
• 2007 Visqueen
• 2005 Blood Run
• 1998 Occupational Hazard
• 1997 Amrep Christmas
• 1996 Scattered, Smothered & Covered
• 1994 Total Destruction
• 1992 Unsane

The soundtrack is completed by some additional songs, notably taken from the rock and independent French scene, such as the Marvin group, Café Flesh and Wharehouse project. The director Franck Richard explains his choices :
“Because I am fed up with hearing people saying there’s no rock music in France, I wanted the soundtrack to be completed by some titles from the French gifted independent rock scene.”
THE CAST

Yolande MOREAU - La Spack
César 2005 for the Best Actress and the best First film - WHEN THE SEA RISES
César 2008 for the Best Actress - SÉRAPHINE

Yolande Moreau took acting courses at the Jacques Lecoq school, and started her career by doing shows for children. In 1982, she wrote a one-woman-show (« Sale affaire, du sexe et du crime ») and she was quickly noticed by Agnès Varda, who then invited her in the world of cinema. First in 1984 in the short movie « 7 p., cuis., s. de b., ... à saisir », and a year later, with « Vagabond ».

Thanks to her sweet madness and her poetry, in 1989 she became one of the main figures of the TV comedy show Les Deschiens. Later on, many French directors solicited her for uncommon roles, especially in the 1995 film HAPPINESS IS IN THE FIELD and THE THREE BROTHERS, and of course in 2000 with AMÉLIE FROM MONTMARTRE.

In 2004, the actress, Yolande Moreau started a new career as a director. With the collaboration of Gilles Porte, she directed QUAND LA MER MONTE, which seduced the public and the press, winning the César for Best First Film, the Prix Delluc and the Best Actress César for Yolande as well. Three years later, her talent as an actress was once again rewarded for SÉRAPHINE (2008), in which film she brought an incontestable emotion.

Émilie DEQUENNE - Charlotte
Best Actress - Cannes Films Festival 1999 - ROSETTA

At a very young age, Émilie Dequenne was already on stage. At 16 years old, right after her A levels, she went on studying political sciences, without letting down her love for theater. Two years later, she replied to a newspaper ad from a production that was looking for a young actress for a feature film. It was for ROSETTA, the film directed by Jean-Pierre and Luc Dardenne for which she became the leading character on screen, facing off 2000 other aspiring young girls. For her remarkable performance, she was awarded the Best Actress Award in the 1999 Cannes Film Festival. Her career began there… and since then, she played in:

- 2010 I FORGOT TO TELL YOU, Laurent Vinas-Raymond
- 2009 THE GIRL ON THE TRAIN, André Téchiné
- 2006 LE GRAND MEAULNES, Jean-Daniel Verhaeghe
- 2005 FISSURES, Alante Kavaïté

- 2001 BROTHERHOOD OF THE WOLF, Christophe Gans
  A HOUSEKEEPER, Claude Berri

Benjamin BIOLAY - Max
Nominated for the Best Actor in a Supporting Role César 2009 - STELLA

Talented musician, composer and singer, Benjamin Biolay first put a foot in cinema in 2004, with the Arnaud Viard film CLARA AND ME, for which he composed the soundtrack. Two years later, he made his first steps as an actor in the feature film DIDINE and for Arte TV in SANG FROID, a film directed by Sylvie Verheyde. His work with director Sylvie Verheyde didn’t stop there. He joined her again in 2007 for the film STELLA and thanks to that, was nominated for the best actor in a supporting role César.

A year later, Biolay came back to TV for Canal +, with the short movie C’EST POUR QUAND . In 2009, Benjamin appeared in the TV film PETITE FILLE by Laëtitia Masson. In 2010, he composed the soundtrack of the film THE QUEEN OF HEARTS.

- 2008 STELLA, Sylvie Verheyde
- 2007 C’EST POUR QUAND?, Katia Lewkowicz
- 2006 DIDINE, Vincent Dietschy
Philippe NAHON - Chinaski

Philippe began acting in 1961 in Jean-Pierre Melville DOULOS. Thanks to his physical appearance and talent, Philippe Nahon has been portraying on screen uncommon characters since his early career.

Philippe is frequently offered roles by the new generation of French filmmakers. He played in THE HATE by Mathieu Kassovitz, CARNE and I STAND ALONE by Gaspar Noé, SWITCHBLADE ROMANCE by Alexandre Aja or THE ORDEAL by Fabrice du Welz.
