LOVER FOR A DAY

L’AMANT D’UN JOUR

DIRECTED BY PHILIPPE GARREL // 2017 // FRANCE // 76 MIN

Contact Information — U.S.

Media: Julia Pacetti, JMP Verdant
julia@jmpverdant.com / 718 399 0400

Booking: Ian Stimler and Mika Kimoto, KimStim
ian@kimstim.com / mika@kimstim.com

For all other questions, contact Lilly Riber, MUBI
lriber@mubi.com / 803 479 3737

Contact Information — U.K.

Publicity: Chris Boyd, Organic
chris.boyd@organic-publicity.co.uk / 020 3372 0970

Booking: Martin Myers
martin@miracle63.co.uk

For all other questions, contact Sanam Gharagozlou, MUBI
sanam@mubi.com / 07407 713406
Synopsis

After a devastating breakup, the only place twenty-three-year old Jeanne has to stay in Paris is the small flat of her father, Giles. But when Jeanne arrives, she finds that her father’s new girlfriend has moved in too: Arianne, a young woman her own age. Each is looking for their own kind of love in a city filled with possibilities.

Lover for a Day premiered in the Directors’ Fortnight at Cannes, where it was awarded the SACD prize from the French Writers and Directors Guild, and is an Official Selection of the 2017 New York Film Festival.
Reviews

“Alluring and very elegantly crafted”
Variety

“A bittersweet, and intoxicating study of relationships in flux”
The Film Stage

“The images—exquisitely shadowed black-and-white 35mm— give the narrative a timelessness that is precisely the point of Garrel’s enterprise”
Film Comment

“Delectable”
ScreenDaily

“The film benefits from the collective contributions of four screenwriters… whose collective insights result in a beautiful complexity”
Variety
When he had fallen with her, when he had dared to take her in his arms, when they had spilled onto the makeshift bed amid all those strangers and children who lived there, at the university, and who seemed oblivious to their presence, however near they were; when he had penetrated her so chastely while she smiled and snuggled closer, slowly shifting her body as her skin melded softly with his skin; then he had realized that, yes, it was to love that they had surrendered; the love that had burst into their lives was unexpected and impossible to refuse. She was twenty and well armed by youth, and he was easily fifty and did not realize that anymore. Twenty also happened to be his daughter’s age. It crossed his mind as he dressed. How would his beloved daughter react? Now that he knew love again.

Philippe Garrel is a French director and actor. He received the Prix Jean-Vigo for The Secret Child in 1982. He was twice awarded at the Venice Film Festival by the Silver Lion for best director, in 1991 for I Don’t Hear the Guitar Anymore and in 2005 for Regular Lovers, for which he also received the Prix Louis-Delluc. His films often relate to the youth of the 60’s protest, to which he belonged.

— Quinzaine des réalisateurs
An Interview with Philippe Garrel

Excerpt from an interview in May in Les Cahiers du Cinéma

After JEALOUSY and IN THE SHADOW OF WOMEN, LOVER FOR A DAY is the third film in a trilogy.

Yes. I had made a triptych before, with La Cicatrice intérieure, Athanor and Le Berceau de cristal intended for a one-off screening lasting 2 hours 45 minutes, at Palais de Chaillot. For a retrospective, I was asked what gift they could give me, so I had asked for two free screenings—one each of La Cicatrice intérieure and Marie pour mémoire—and for a screening of those three films together without the lights being brought up between them. Before that, Athanor had been attacked by a critic, who said I was banging my head against a wall, against the obvious fact that cinema was movement. La Cicatrice was tracking shots and music. Athanor was silence and still shots. Then it was back to Le Berceau with AshRa Tempel’s music. So Athanor worked fine as an interlude between two parts of a concert. This time, it is a trilogy; the films are not made to be screened together.

When did it occur to you that your last three films formed a trilogy?

In pre-production on the second. I’d made Jealousy and seen that the prototype worked. The film was 75 minutes long. 15 minutes less is 15 minutes less to produce. There are plenty of examples of short films in cinema history. Nobody remembers that Battleship Potemkin is 65 minutes long. So I produced three iterations of that prototype—a 75-minute movie, shot in 21 days, in CinemaScope and black & white.

Beyond economic considerations, was the trilogy rooted in thematic motifs?

As a viewer, I like the other arts just as much as cinema. I am no more a film buff than a lover of painting. But there is one thing I have done long-term in my life, and that is to read Freud. I must have started in 1975. At the Conservatoire, for several years now, I have made students learn Dora’s two dreams, or the wolf man’s dream. When I make a film—and this is why I love Bergman almost as much as Godard—there is a Freudian assignment that I impose upon myself. In Jealousy, my subject matter was female neurosis; in In the shadow of women, female libido; in Lover for a day, the female unconscious. In Lover for a day, I wanted to deal with the Electra complex, the female counterpart of the Oedipus complex, although they are not perfectly symmetrical. Electra plotted the death of her mother, Clytemnestra, because she remarried. The film tells the story of a conscious friendship between a young woman and her stepmother, who is the same age as her, and how the young woman’s unconscious drives her to get rid of this rival for her father’s love. It’s not fundamental to understand this, but that’s how I constructed the film.
Cast

Eric Caravaca
Gilles

Esther Garrel
Jeanne

Louise Chevillote
Ariane

Credits

Directed by Philippe Garrel

Screenplay by
Jean-Claude Carriere
Caroline Dureau
Arlette Langmann
Philippe Garrel

Director of Photography
Renato Berta

Edited by François Gedigier

Produced by
Said Ben Said
Michel Merkt

Music by
Jean-Louis Aubert

Starring
Eric Caravaca (Gilles)
Esther Garrel (Jeanne)
Louise Chevillote (Ariane)

A production of SBS Films and Arte France.
A MUBI release.